The lion's share of demonisation of Whites is the charge that Whites were inveterate slavers who lounged on settees sipping tea whilst slaves from Africa fanned them

#WhitePrivilege

Never mind that that Whites ended slavery, paying with their money & their lives

[thread]

In 1833, Britain used 40% of its national budget to buy freedom for all slaves in the Empire. Britain borrowed such a large sum of money for the Slavery Abolition Act that it wasn't paid off until 2014. This means that living British citizens helped pay for the ending of the slave trade with their taxes.

Never mind Europeans themselves were slaves for centuries longer & in conditions that make "Roots" look like summer camp

A captured European slave was chained to an oar in a galley~never again setting foot on dry land or in a slave pit in 40lb irons~never removed

1.5 mil Whites

The White slaves of the Ottomans, totaling 1.5 mil European children, women & men over the centuries had various grim fates:

One was the slave pit. There Sub-Saharan African overseers were expert in "tossing" the skin and bones slaves into the air to break bones or cause death.

Another cruel fate for a captured European made slave was the Ottoman galley where below deck they were chained to oars for the remainder of their natural lives.

They were also frequently blinded with hot coals and/or castrated in conjunction with this terrible fate.

The enslavement of Europeans is sometimes referred to as:

The Barbary Slave Trade or
White Slavery

The latter term has come to be associated with women generally forced into sex slavery.

A life shut into a harem by the Islamic Ottomans was the fate of captured European women.

Whole coastal areas of Europe were abandoned for fear of slave raids & entire villages were emptied of their populations as all were kidnapped.

European slaves were captured from as far as Iceland, and as near as Italy

One such village was Baltimore in Ireland

"One of the things that both the public and many scholars have tended to take as given is that slavery was always racial in nature," said historian Robert Davis, author of Christian Slaves, Muslim Masters: White Slavery in the Mediterranean, the Barbary Coast, and Italy . "But that is not true," he added.

In comments which may stoke controversy, Davis claims that white slavery had been minimised or ignored because academics preferred to treat Europeans as evil colonialists rather than as victims.

When Europeans were slaves...

In my new book The History of Jihad From Muhammad to ISIS, I recount how in July 1625, a twenty-ship contingent of jihadi pirates from Morocco arrived in Mount's Bay in southern England. Bursting into the local parish church during a service, they captured sixty men, women, and children from the terrified congregation and took them back to Morocco, to live a life of slavery. At Looe, they took eighty more and set the town ablaze. In a series of similar raids, they took two hundred people as slaves and seized twenty-seven British ships as well.

All this is forgotten in England today, where any discussion of the jihad threat will get you charges of "Islamophobia" and "racism."

@PoliticalIslam @YouTube One of the most famous European slaves to live to tell the tale was Thomas Pellow of Cornwall:

Thomas Pellow (1704 – ?) was a Cornish author best known for the extensive captivity narrative entitled The History of the Long Captivity & Adventures of Thomas Pellow in South-Barbary

The black slave-drivers were extremely cruel to the men under their charge. '[They] immediately punish the least stop or inadvertancy,' wrote Thomas Pellow, 'and often will not allow the poor creatures time to eat their bread.' The drivers worked in shifts and, at the end of each shift, would tell their replacement which of the slaves had been slack in their work. The new driver would then raise his cudgel and beat the hapless slaves, 'which he always took care to bestow on those parts where he thought they would do most hurt'. Mouette said that most of the slave-drivers would strike at the head, 'and, when he had broke it, counterfeited the charitable surgeon, applying some unslackened lime to stanch the bleeding'. If any slave was beaten so badly that he was no longer able to work, the slave-driver 'had a dreadful way of enabling him, by redoubling the stripes, so that the new ones made him forget the old'.

The slave-drivers often amused themselves by waking the men at night. 'It frequently happens,' wrote Pellow, '[that] they are hurried away to some filthy work in the night time, with this call in Spanish, "Vamos a travacho cornutos", i.e. "Out to work, you cuckolds." The exhausted men were beaten from their beds and obliged to do another few hours of hard labour.

The guard of the French slaves had been known to punish the men by reducing their already scant rations and sometimes ordered them to clean the city's sewers. '[He] made us empty

We took the liberty to make some inquiries concerning the grounds of their [Barbary's] pretensions to make war upon nations who had done them no injury, and observed that we considered all mankind as our friends who had done us no wrong, nor had given us any provocation. The ambassador answered us that it was founded on the laws of their Prophet, that it was written in their Koran, that all nations who should not have acknowledged their authority were sinners, that it was their right and duty to make war upon them wherever they could be found, and to make slaves of all they could take as prisoners, and that every Musselman who should be slain in battle was sure to go to Paradise.

One need not conjecture what the American ambassadors—who years earlier had asserted that all men were "endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights" –thought of their Muslim counterpart's answer. Suffice to say, because the ransom demanded was over fifteen times greater than what Congress had approved, little came of the meeting.

Here's Eaton's account as he visits the "Turks" to try to work out peace for the new American Republic~

Desperate measures were needed: enter William Eaton. As U.S. consul to Tunis (1797–1803), he had lived among and understood the region's Muslims well. He knew that "the more you give the more the Turks will ask for," and despised that old sense of Islamic superiority: "It grates me mortally," he wrote, "when I see a lazy Turk [generic for Muslim] reclining at his ease upon an embroidered sofa, with one Christian slave to hold his pipe, another to hold his coffee, and a third to fan away the flies." Seeing that the newborn American navy was making little headway against the seasoned pirates, he devised a daring plan: to sponsor the claim of Mustafa's brother, exiled in Alexandria; and then to march the latter's supporters and mercenaries through five hundred miles of desert, from Alexandria onto Tripoli.

Islamic Ottoman Turks enslaved whites

The Islamic Trade in European Slaves

by Emmet Scott

It is common knowledge that for over a thousand years, Arab and Muslim slavers took enormous numbers of men, women and children from sub-Saharan Africa. What is not so well known is that they took equally large numbers of people from Europe. As with Africa, Arab slave-taking in Europe began in the seventh century — shortly after the rise of Islam — and continued virtually without interruption into the modern epoch.

Modern Western culture, with its Anglo-centric worldview, has an almost obsessive preoccupation with the European trade in African slaves, a trade that commenced in the late fifteenth century and ended in the mid-nineteenth, but seems to have little knowledge of or interest in the equally intense Muslim trade in European slaves during the same epoch. This is a strange state of affairs, given the fact that, in general, the Europeans enslaved by the Muslims between the fifteenth and nineteenth centuries were treated appallingly, and the trade had a long-term and devastating impact upon large areas of the continent.
